Introduction

The work Dhvanyāloka by Ānandavardhana of ninth Century (AD) Kashmir is a unique text in the history of Alaṃkāraśāstra and it has shaped considerably the thinking of the successive generations of writers on Indian poetics. This text has been translated into English by K. Krishnamurthy (1974) and now another translation of this text with the commentary of Abhinavagupta is available by Daniel H.H. Ingalls, J.M. Masson and M.V. Patwardhan (1990). A concordance to this Sanskrit text will enable the interested readers to analyse the language used by Ānandavardhana.

The standard edition of Dhvanyāloka with Locana and Bālapriya commentaries was brought out in 1940 (Chowkhamba) by Patabhirama Sastri in the Kashi Sanskrit Series (no.135). But this edition is not easily available now for the students. So the concordance is prepared based on the critical edition with an English translation (juxtaposed) by K. Krishnamurthy. It was first published by the Kartanaka University, Dharwar in 1974 and later it was reprinted by Motilal Banarsidas, Delhi (1982).

Word-indices are available for texts like Upaniṣads, Bhagavadgītā, Śaṅkarabhāṣya and so on. Now some more indices are coming out even for purāṇas. But to date there is no word-index of the Dhvanyāloka, for that matter for any text on Alaṃkāraśāstra in the hands of the public. This tool of analysis is not merely a great help in the hands of the research scholars but it will give a new orientation for an interested reader to be more familiar with the text and for the understanding of its content.

Even in preparing a word-index one can already focus on what is aimed at and hence the method of presentation might vary. A word-index for instance usually lists the words and gives references to all the occurrences of a particular word in the text. Here it is not merely a reference to page and the line is given but also the phase in which a particular word occurs. The advantage is that an average reader does not have to turn the pages of the original text to check in which context a particular word occurs. So the purpose of this concordance is also to help the reader locate passages with which he/she is somewhat familiar, since Dhvanyāloka is a well-known text among the Sanskrit students at the college level. Hence it is in the form of a concordance rather than a mere a word-index.

Following are the principles according to which words have been identified and listed in this concordance:

1. The conjugational forms of a verb are entered under its root e.g. gacchati, agacchat, jagāma, agamat etc. will be under the root gam. Other verbal derivatives such as infinitives, gerunds and verbal adjectives are entered alphabetically.

- A verb with a prefix is inserted in alphabetical order. However the prefix and the roots are indicated by separating them. e.g. abhi √dhā.

2. Nouns with all their inflections are entered in their nominative form. e.g. aṃśena will be entered under aṃśa.

3. Compound words are split and each component is listed as separate entry:

-Some compound words like arthaśakti, śabdaśakti, arthābhidhāya are entered as a whole and artha, abhidhāya find also separate entries .

-Compound words with upasarga are given separate entries as well as the main word of that compound. e.g. ativimala as a whole and vimala separately again.

-Compounds formed with the suffixal verbal derivatives such as kṛt, vid, bhuk etc. are not split up. E.g. karmakṛt, kṛtsnavid, kṣamābhuj and so on.

-Negative words are not given separately. They are given as a compound words only, ananugūṇa, anadhisandheya etc.

-Words like upoḍarāga, kalindaśaulatanayā give their proper meanings only in the compound words as twilight and Yamuna. So these words are not split up.

Like kaḥ, kā, kim under kim, so too kaścit, kācit, kincit words are brought under kincit.

4. If there are two different meanings for a single word, two entries are made. e.g. arjuna / tree and/ the name of a person . So too are the words like citra, guru, and so on are entered separately according to their meanings.

This volume has a long history of over ten years in its preparation. It was begun in 1980. But the process was interrupted for various reasons. It looks as if the delay had also its positive side, as it became gradually clearer concerning its format. Originally it was planned to publish it in devanāgarī script. But with the computer facilities it was changed to Roman script.

A few people have helped me in preparing the cards and cheking the text. In a special way I must acknowledge with appreciation the contribution of Mrs. Rajeswari, who re-arranged the cards, typed them into the computer and read the proof and of Miss. Betsy Lewis, who prepared the laser print-out for the press.
